

Devotional Notions for the Advent Season

'Tis the season—the Advent season! The season of preparation for the celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ at Christmas and for the Second Coming of Christ. Along with spending time driving in high volume traffic, decorating before company comes, Christmas movie watching, and eating seasonal desserts with reckless abandon, here are some more contemplative things to do.

Richard Rohr is one of my favorite devotional writers; you can get his Advent devotional book in print or sign up to receive his daily devotional emails.

<https://store.cac.org/collections/all/products/preparing-for-christmas>

If you do not know Kate Bowler, you should.. A popular writer and podcaster, Kate teaches at Duke (which, okay, I'll overlook for now, with Jesus around the corner and all). She consistently writes inspiring and thoughtful stuff out of her own very personal story. This is the second year she has offered an Advent devotional.

https://courses.katebowler.com/courses/adventdevotional/?mc_cid=ea26d744d3&mc_eid=e15c3748b3

This expertly curated devotional resource from the faculty at Biola University is a daily email offering that you sign up to receive. It includes not just thoughtful devotional content, but art and music carefully chosen to support the content. Well worth a try.

<https://cca.biola.edu/advent/2023/>

This devotional guide is written by the faculty of Luther Seminary in St. Paul, MN. Available to download for free in regular and large print editions.

P.S.: There is also a display of printed advent devotional booklets free to pick up on the long table in the narthex.